

Christopher Juniper

Mr. Juniper, a resident of the USA, is an economist by training whose skills include economic development management, sustainability consulting and tool development, business development and management, and sustainability performance presentations and workshops. As a sustainability consultant since 1997, he has helped US and international communities and businesses with sustainable business and economic development strategies and training.

Clients have included the International Finance Corporation, the United Nations' Environment and Social Commission for the Asia-Pacific region, the U.S. Army, numerous small and large businesses, and city governments.

He is Co-founding Director of the Sustainability Leadership Institute, and presently serves the following organizations as a board or advisory member: Asia-Pacific Roundtable for Sustainable Consumption and Production, Federal Network for Sustainability, CORE Colorado (a sustainable business trade association), Colorado Springs Utilities, the National Biodiesel Board's Sustainable Biodiesel Task Force, and Turtledove Alliance, a start-up for-profit business promoting sustainable consumption in the US. He holds a BA Economics and is a certified Development Finance Professional.